These structures can be revealed by drawing straight lines connecting the centres of the circles in the correct order. We are all currently involved in a process of evolution which is rapidly expanding our consciousness and promoting change in our energetic structures. A major aspect of this evolutionary change is the requirement for us to remember how to use and assimilate high frequency energy in the form of light, through all aspects of our being. However, the old patterns of density that we have become accustomed to, create a resistance to this process that can sometimes be slow to shift, especially at a denser level.

This combination will help to break down that resistance and remind us of our original patterning of perfection.
